Hold it in your hand and it becomes immediately apparent what a remarkable, extraordinarily versatile material glass is. It can be shaped into countless forms, rendered smooth and clear, or frosted and opaque. It can appear infinitely fine and light as air, or strong and remarkably fluid.

Thornton is cloaked in a bespoke master-crafted glass exterior - making it the most breathtakingly beautiful, private and exclusive residential offering on the Brisbane river.

Thornton is cloaked in a bespoke master-crafted glass exterior - making it the most breathtakingly beautiful, private and exclusive residential offering on the Brisbane river.

Designing with glass is incredibly rewarding. It is a versatile, tactile and beautiful material. It can be used to reveal an unbroken aspect or to temper natural light. It can deliver privacy and energy efficiency.

In the design of Thornton, we have worked with glass to wrap living spaces in a translucent skin. The forms float above the landscape providing fluidity in shape, opacity to hint at function, and clarity to frame and highlight the breathtaking views.

Everything happens in the kitchen. The day begins and ends here. It's the engine room, where ingredients are transformed, wine is tasted and culinary secrets are shared. It's a room that's full of life, the real living room.

Thierry Galichet's vision for each kitchen within Thornton would bring a smile to the face of any Michelin starred chef. An entrepreneur's dream, state-of-the-art meets simplicity with purpose-built engineering seamlessly underlying all forms of cooking. A custom galley bench in Novetto Striato stone provides the canvas for the most demanding of chefs and forms the backbone for all kitchen gatherings. The butcher's pantry, searing drawer, automated drop-down bar, Chalmagne fridge drawer, wine fridge, PTT gas burner, Gaggenau 400 Series oven, steam oven and warming tower are all intelligently placed to fulfil their roles in entertaining with ease and excellence.

THORNTON

THIERRY GALICHET

Most famous for pioneering the legendary Mont racine, his new dining scene for over thirty-five years. Born in France's Burgundy region, the famed chef and restaurateur approaches each of his endeavours with gusto, creativity, and emotional intelligence. His vision for designing each kitchen within Thornton was no exception. Galichet's culinary techniques and powerful expression of the dining occasion starts with an homage to the preparation of produce and cooking mastery. Thornton residents will revel in the very existence of what he proclaims as the engine room of every residence, with each touch point conceived and created with consideration for the sense of occasion and cause for celebration.

THORNTON

Thornton's interior design is inspired by nature. From the blonde timber to the natural stone veneer from the quarries of Greece, 'natural' products have been used wherever possible to create a sense of timelessness and a sense of art. The design team at Thornton's project is a testament to Galichet's collaboration, respect, and expertise in creating the vision for each residence. The dedication with matching stone detail on the island through the kitchen, the elegant stone wall, the professional finish, the single quartz for every natural stone element, from the magnificent kitchen islands and gallery to the level expansion, the results are a masterpiece in the perfectly matched natural stone kitchen. Residents intuitively adapt to the tone of day and of the sun with fully automated aluminium blinds. When you explore, your eye is rewarded with perfection. From the commissioned work of art to the fully layered or the arrival lights glowing softly behind above a glass door.

IN THE DETAIL

Our motivation for Thornton is to create an environment that is intrinsically beautiful yet effortlessly functional. Residences that allow you to live in your surroundings with ease.

"We have learnt to never underestimate the value of collaboration. The team is empowered to bring their innovative architectural response to the project and make it truly exceptional."

Position and aspect are the starting points of any great design and without doubt, Thornton occupies one of Brisbane's most unique and exclusive sites, with an ultra rare north facing aspect.

Situated at the last waters edge property in the upper part of the Kangaroo Point peninsula, Thornton overlooks the city and sits on its own promontory between parklands and the ferry.

Its absolute river front location, nestled against and connected to the green open reserve of the Kangaroo Point parklands, ensures that it can never be built out. It is perfectly positioned to capture northern breezes characterised by Kangaroo Point's unique landscape, along the west of the river. Thornton's north facing rear aspect delivers spectacular 200 degree views from Brisbane's South Bank and Botolph Claydon across the full length of the River City skyline through to the iconic Story Bridge.

Such an incredible position demanded a design in harmony with its surroundings, with a fluid grace, superbly minimalist and proportion.

THE ENDURING QUALITY OF NATURAL STONE

Large pieces of stone, cut from the mountains and hauled to distant places, have always served as a sign of wealth and power. Trace the path of the world's most coveted stone, and you follow the major movements of wealth in human history. From ancient Greece to Victorian London to 20th-century New York and now to Thornton.

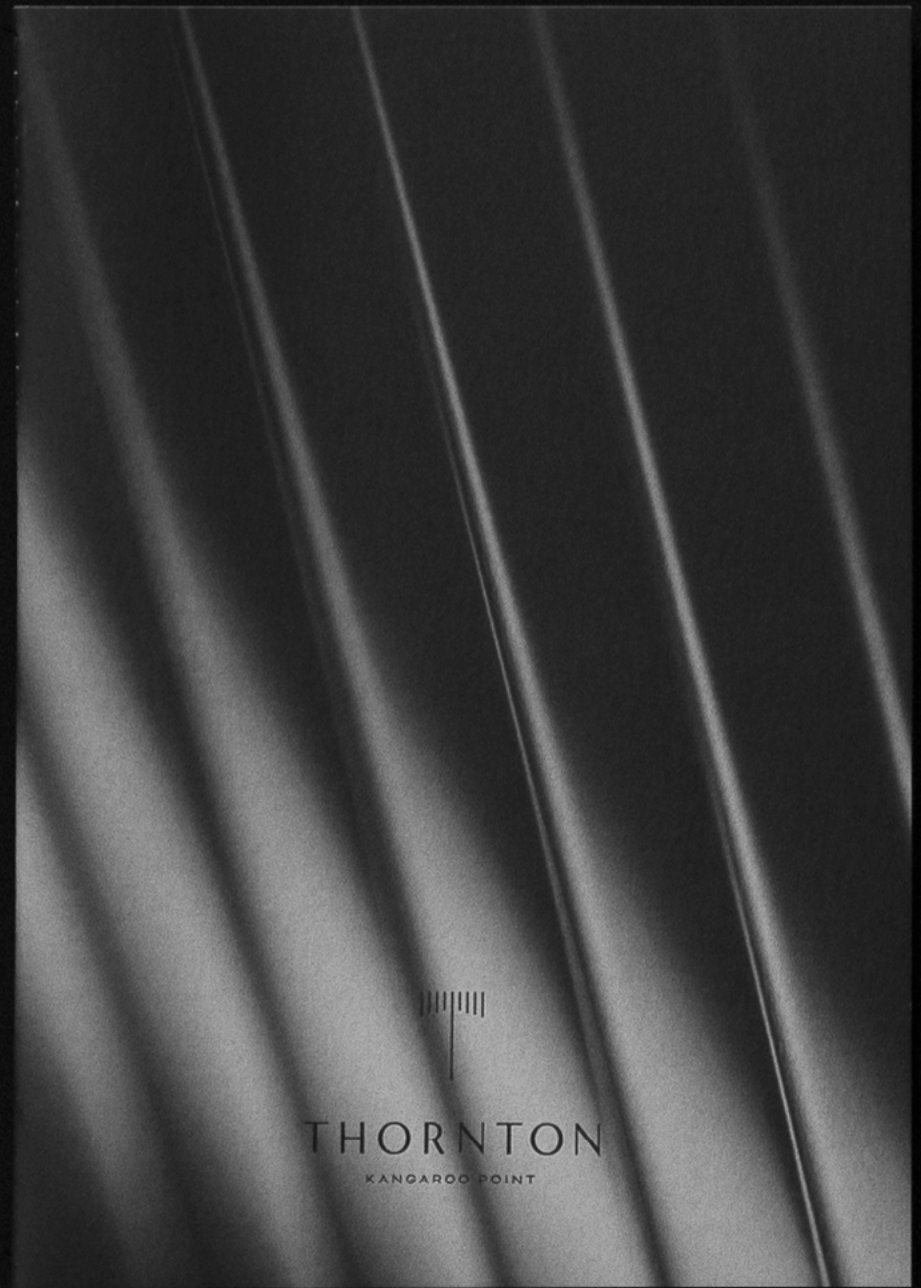

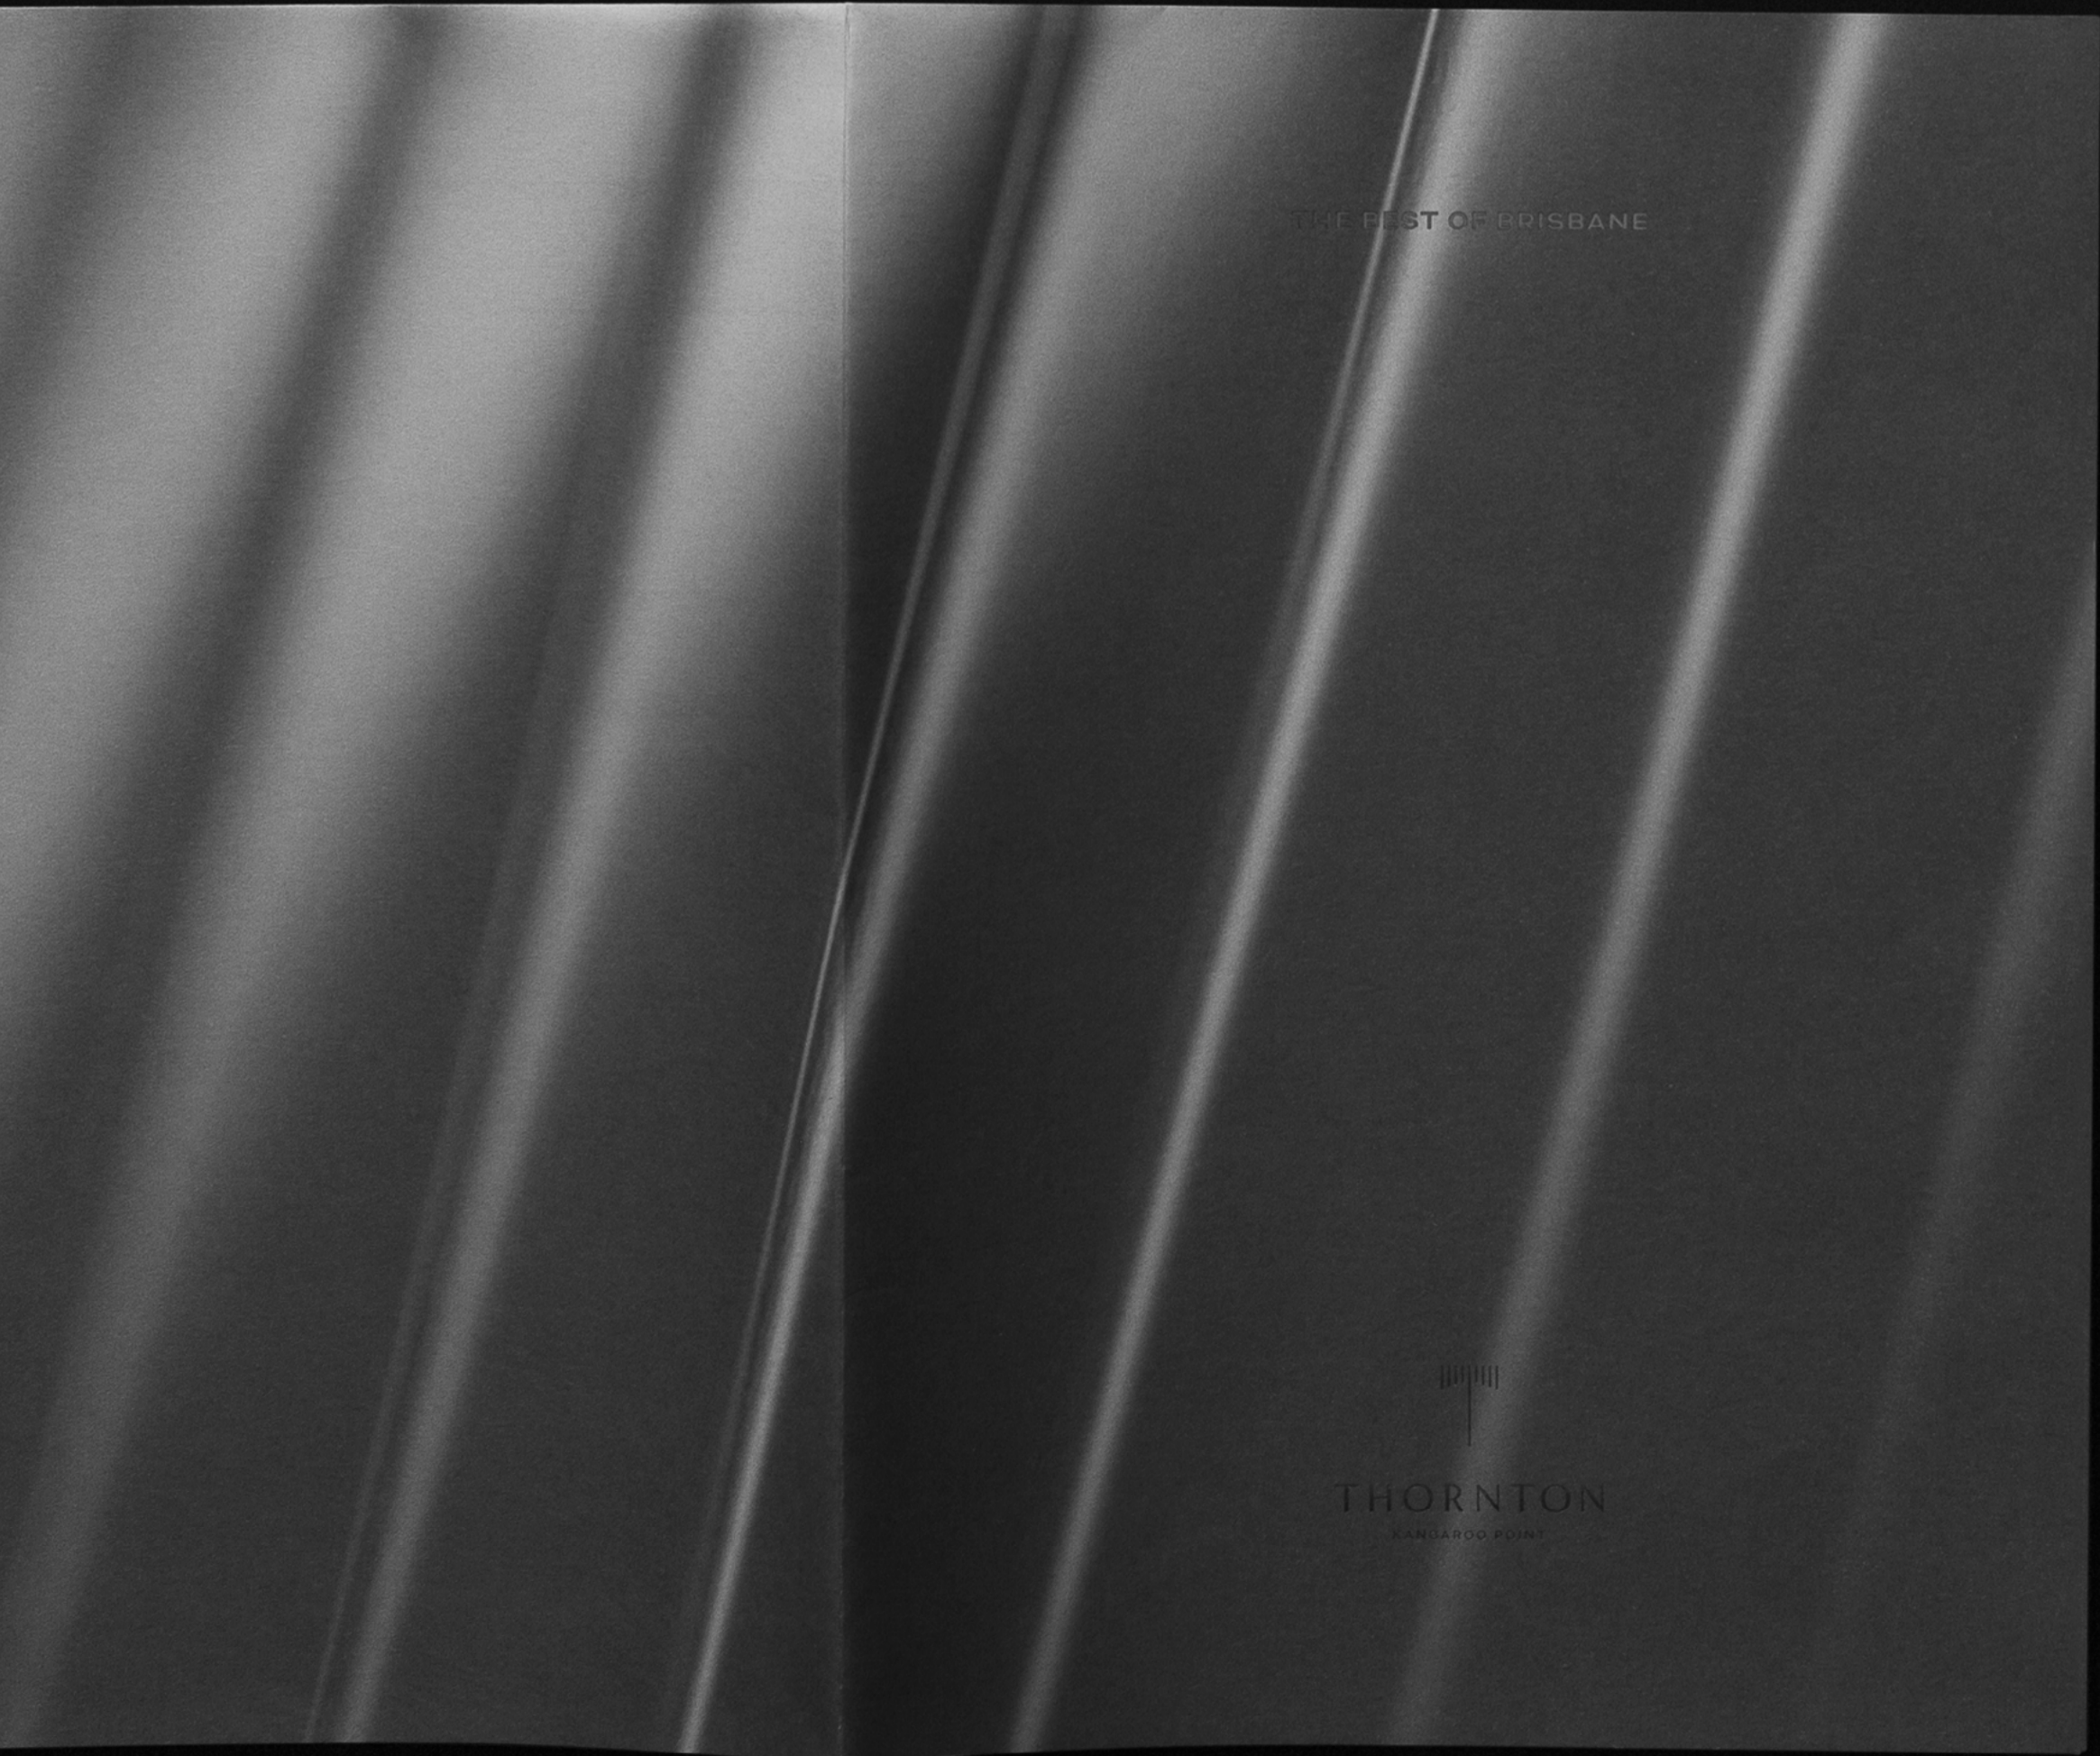

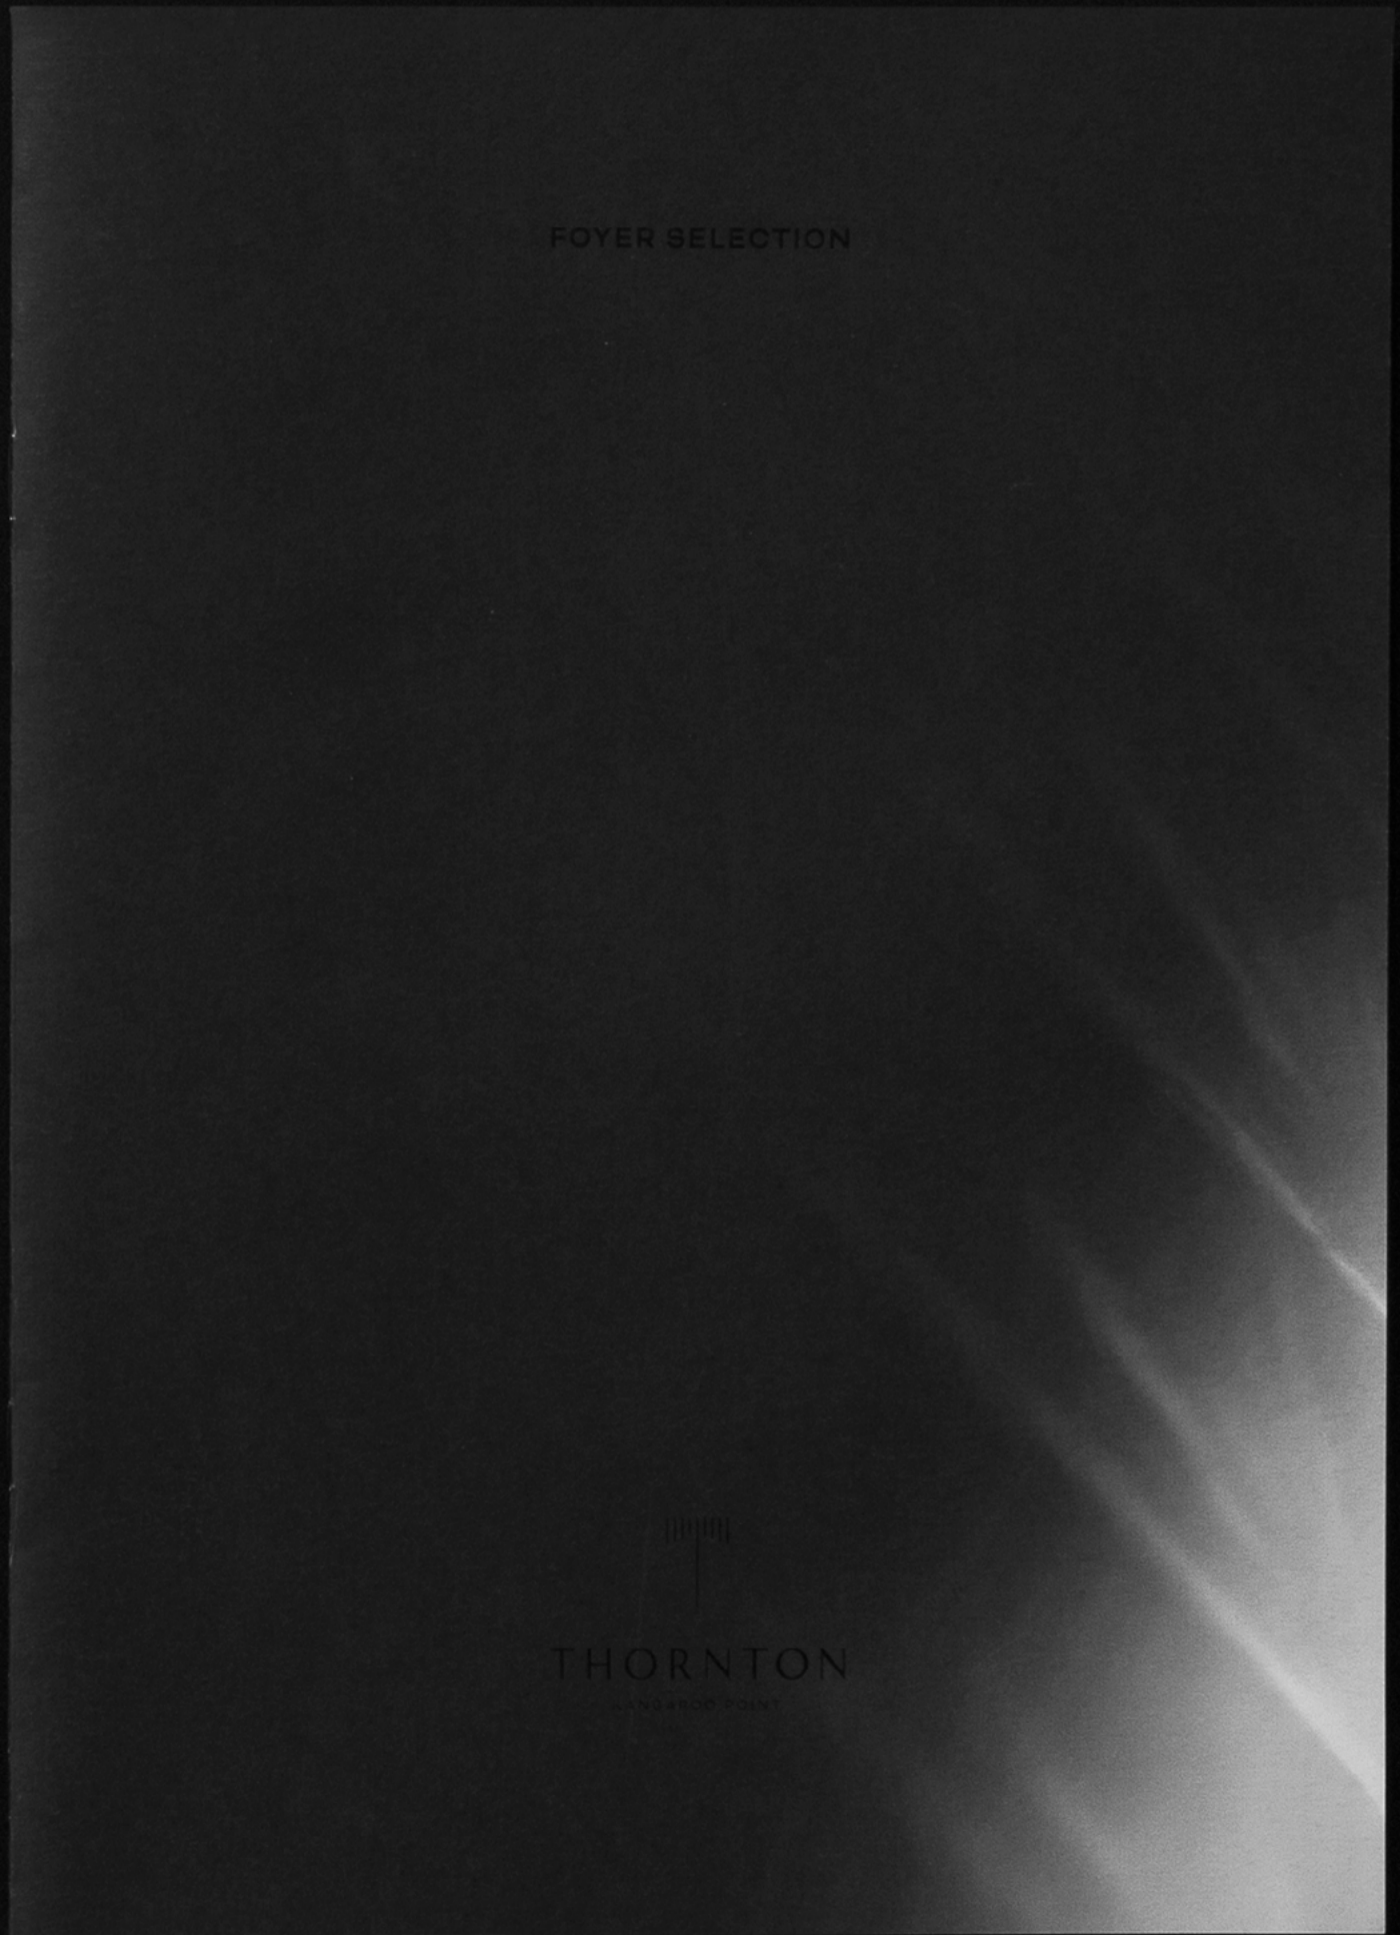

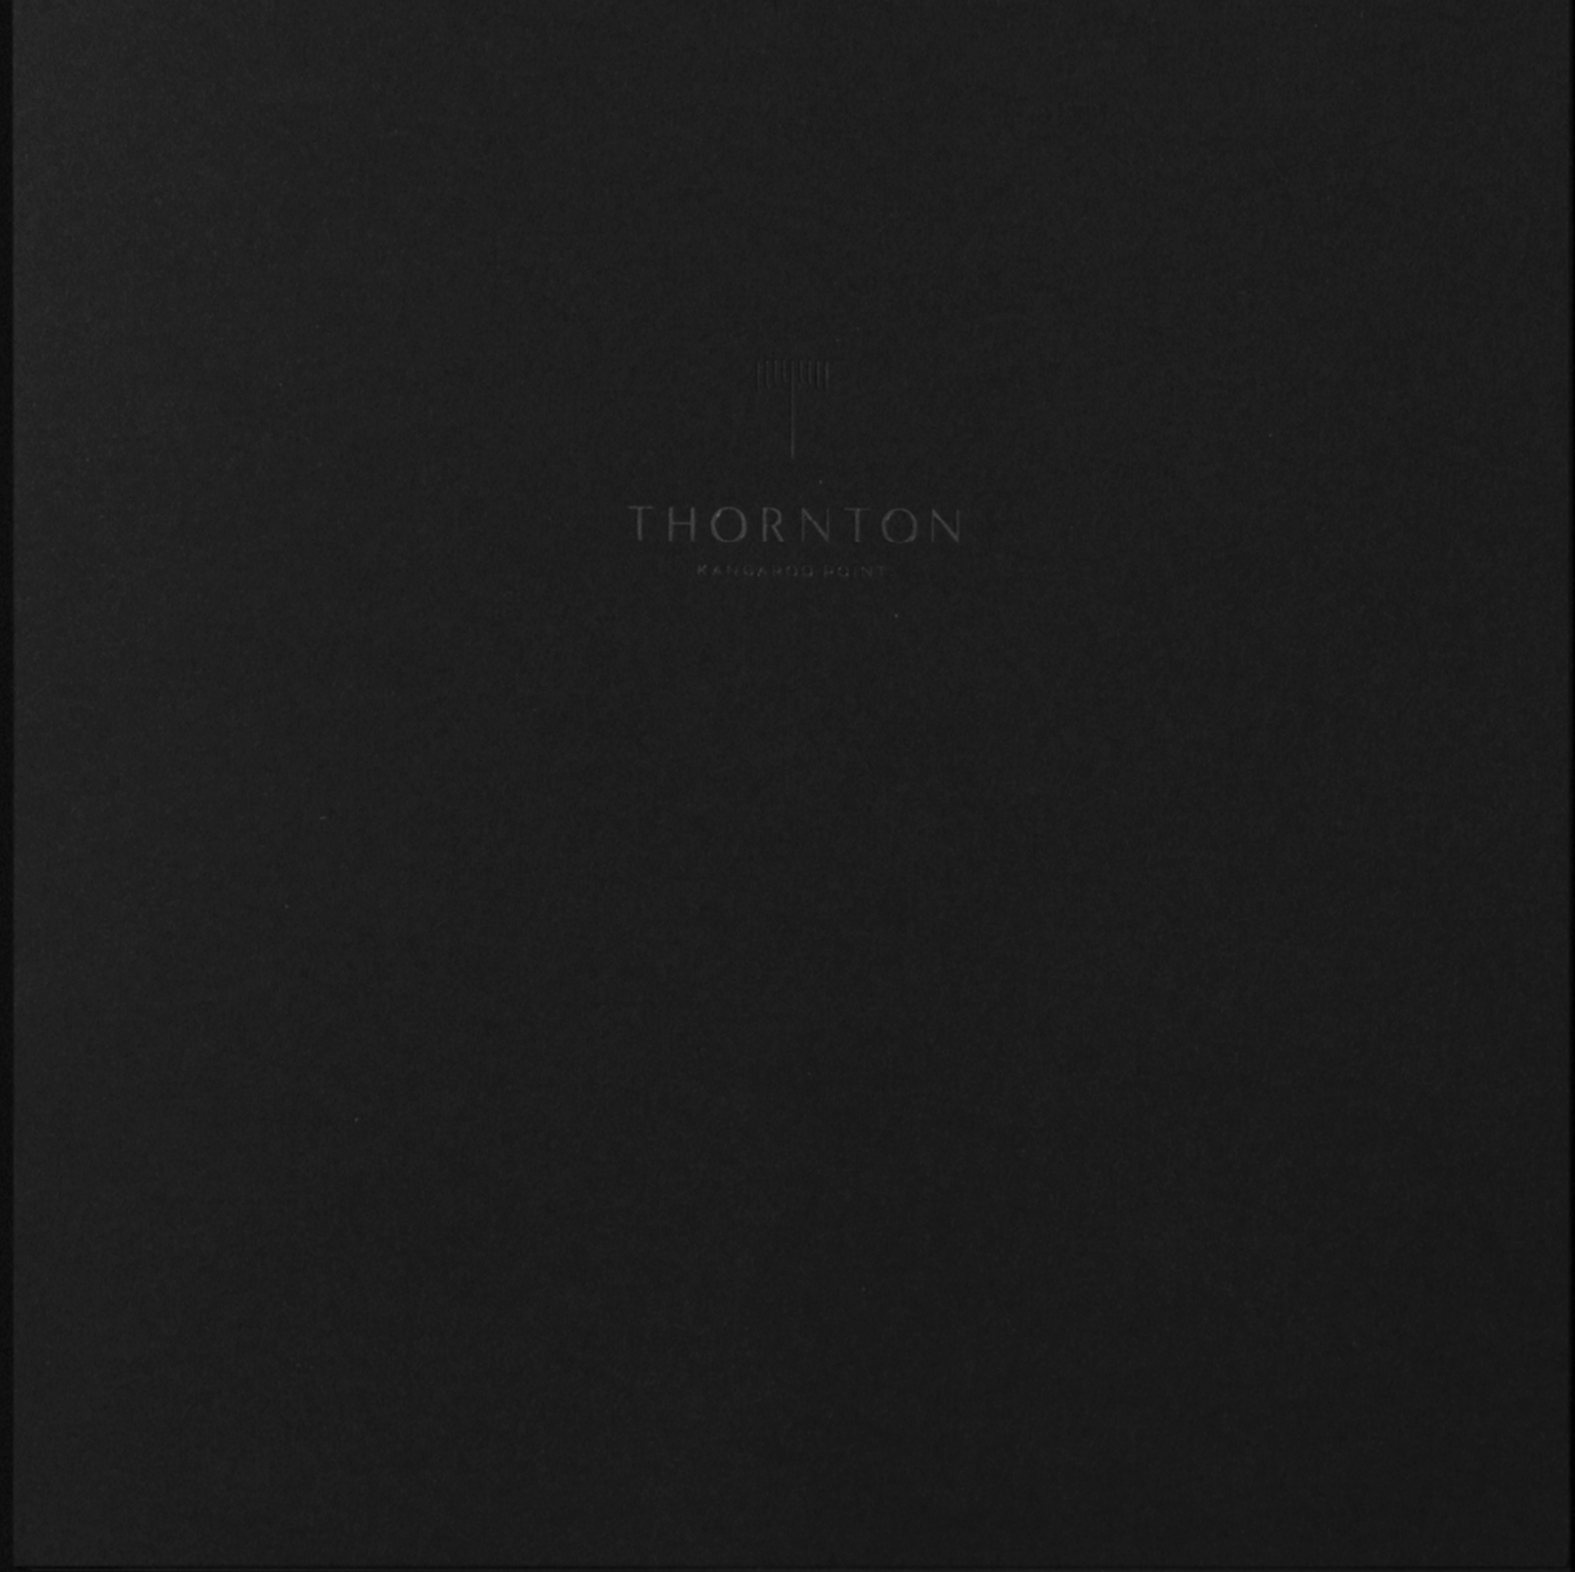

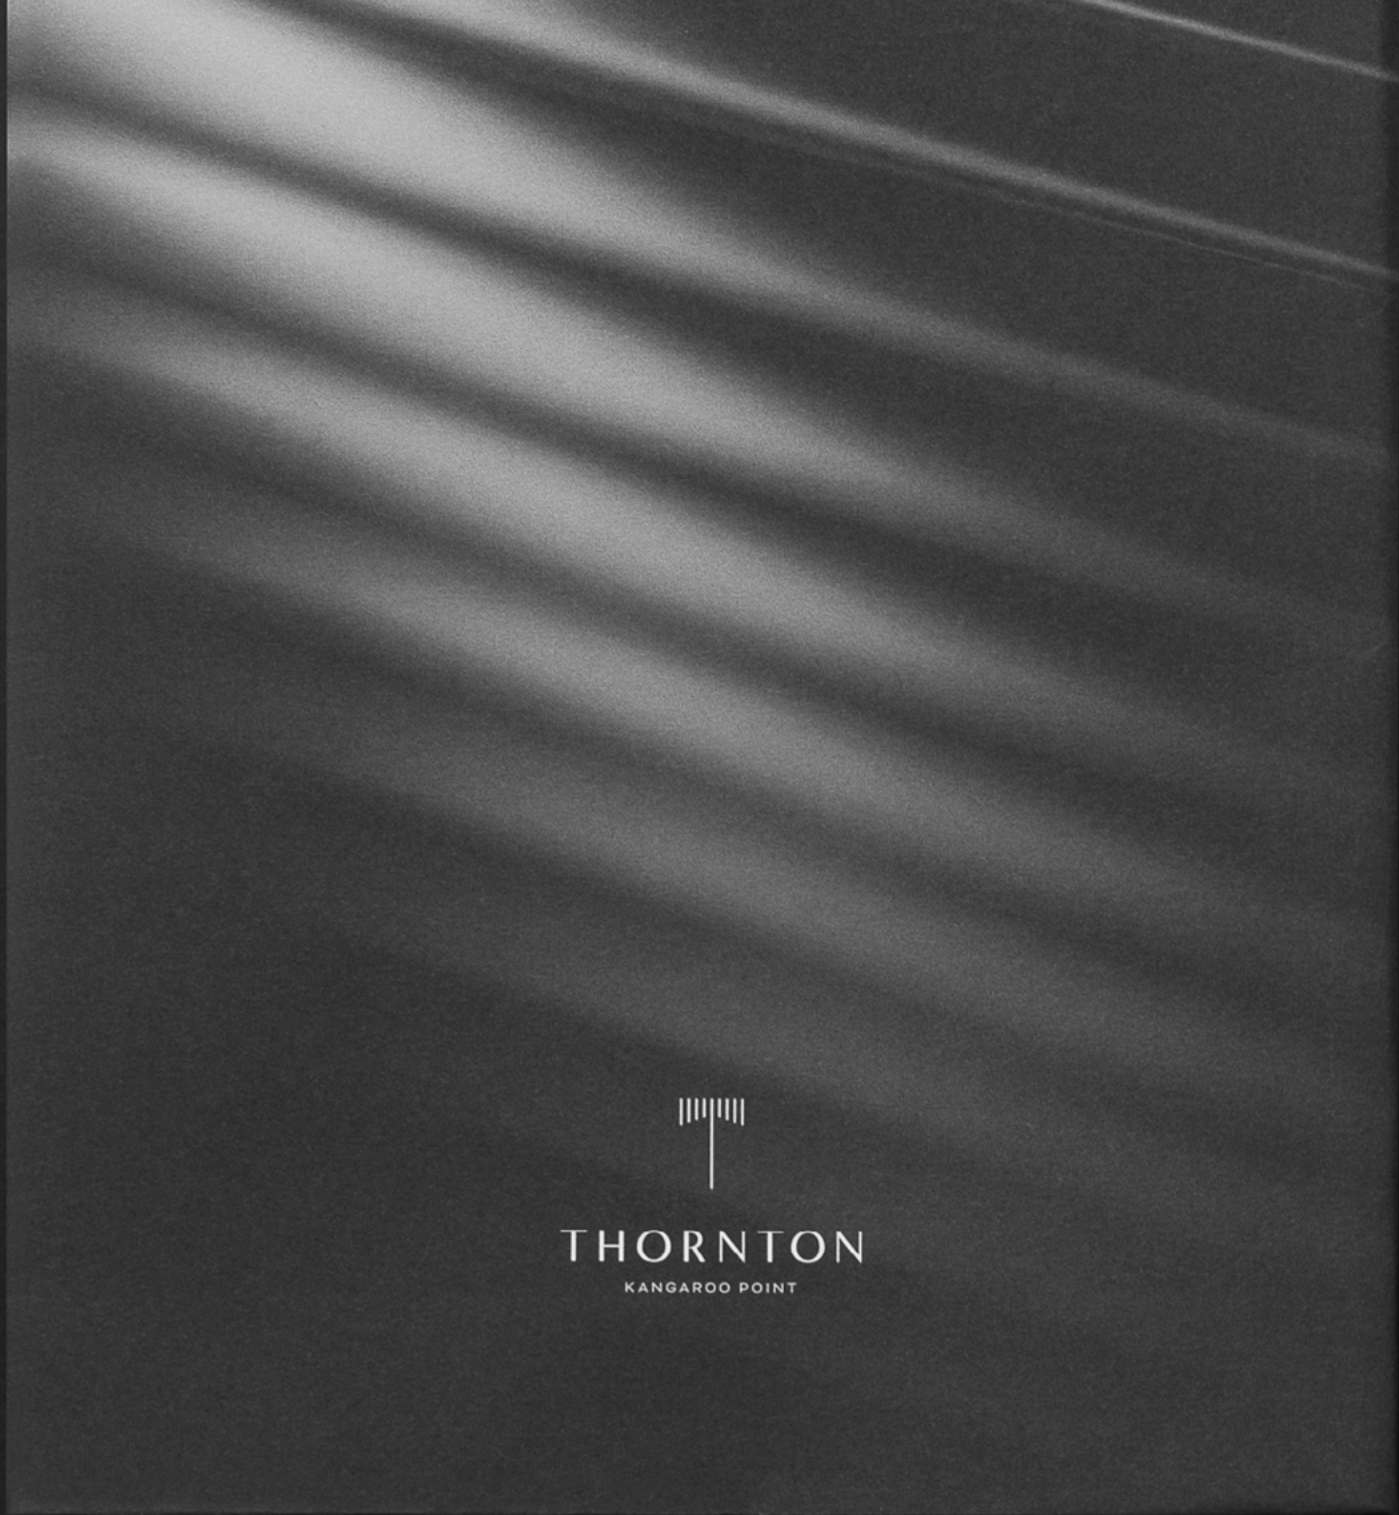

What we admire today as mesmerising linear stone was born hundreds of millions of years ago. Countless generations of tiny sea creatures lived, died and slowly drifted to settle at the bottom of a primordial ocean. Over aeons, their bodies were slowly compressed by gravity, layer upon layer, tighter and tighter, until eventually they petrified into the interlocking white crystals that make up natural stone.

Thousands of years later, in the breakup of the supercontinent Pangea, tectonic jostling raised the ancient sea floor and the crystallized creatures became breathtaking, towering mountains. In some places they rise more than 6,000 feet into the air.

The word marble comes from the ancient Greek verb 'marmairo' which means 'to glow'. Like gold, this natural stone is its own form of steadfast wealth, visually striking and highly sought after. In Greece, the source of Thornton's natural stone, the iconic architecture of the ancient world has continued to attract the world's admiration for centuries.

This is the very stone the famous Venus de Milo was carved from, that now floats gracefully above the Brisbane River within the residences of Thornton.

LIFE IS ALL ABOUT THE DETAIL

Serenity, beauty and presence are too often undervalued in architecture, coming secondary to technology, trends and economy. In Thornton we have created a space that takes us back to first principles: that life is all about the smallest details and that a dedication to prioritising proportion, light and texture can result in spaces and views that are extraordinary.
