

Everything happens in the kitchen. The day begins and ends here. It's the engine room, where ingredients are transformed, wine is tasted and culinary secrets are shared. It's a room that's full of life, the real living room.

Thierry Galichet's vision for each kitchen within Thornton would bring a smile to the face of any Michelin starred chef. An entrepreneur's dream, state-of-the-art meets simplicity with purpose-built engineering seamlessly underlying all forms of cooking. A custom galley built in Novotro Striato stone provides the canvas for the most demanding of chefs and forms the backbone for all kitchen gatherings. The builder's pantry, seaming drawer, automated drop-down bar, Chalmagne fridge drawer, wine fridge, PTT gas burner, Gaggenau 400 Series oven, steam oven and everything in between are all thoughtfully placed to fulfil their roles in entertaining with ease and excellence.

THORNTON

THIERRY GALICHET

Most famous for pioneering the legendary Mont racinet, his new dining scene for over thirty-five years.

Born in France's Burgundy region, the famed chef and restaurateur approaches each of his endeavours with gusto, creativity, and emotional intelligence. His vision for designing each kitchen within Thornton was no exception. Galichet's culinary techniques and powerful expression of the dining occasion starts with an homage to the preparation of produce and cooking mastery. Thornton residents will revel in the very existence of what he proclaims as the engine room of every residence, with each touch point conceived and created with consideration for the sense of occasion and cause for celebration.

IN THE DETAIL

LIAM PROBERTS

ARCHITECT AND CREATIVE DIRECTOR
BUREAU'D PROBERTS

'We have learnt to never underestimate the value of collaboration. The team is empowered to bring their innovative architectural response to the project and make it truly exceptional.'

Position and aspect are the starting points of any great design and without doubt, Thornton occupies one of Brisbane's most unique and exclusive sites, with an ultra-rare north facing aspect.

Situated at the last waters-edge property in the upper part of the Kangaroo Point peninsula, Thornton overlooks the city and sits on its own promontory between parklands and the ferry.

Its absolute riverfront location, nestled against and connected to the green space reserve of the Kangaroo Point parklands, ensures that it can never be built out. It is perfectly positioned to capture northern breezes channelled by Kangaroo Point's unique landscape, along the curve of the river. Thornton's north-facing river aspect delivers spectacular 200 degree views from Brisbane's South Bank and Botanic Gardens across the full length of the River City skyline through to the iconic Story Bridge.

Such an incredible position demanded a design in harmony with its surroundings, with a fluid grace, superb symmetry and proportion.

JOHN LIVINGSTONE

THE ENDURING QUALITY OF NATURAL STONE

Large pieces of stone, cut from the mountains and hauled to distant places, have always served as a sign of wealth and power. Trace the path of the world's most coveted stone, and you follow the major movements of wealth in human history. From ancient Greece to Victorian London to 20th-century New York and now to Thornton.

What we admire today as mesmerising linear stone was born hundreds of millions of years ago. Countless generations of tiny sea creatures lived, died and slowly drifted to settle at the bottom of a primordial ocean. Over aeons, their bodies were slowly compressed by gravity, layer upon layer, tighter and tighter, until eventually they petrified into the interlocking white crystals that make up natural stone.

Thousands of years later, in the breakup of the supercontinent Pangea, tectonic jostling raised the ancient sea floor and the crystallized creatures became breathtaking, towering mountains. In some places they rise more than 6,000 feet into the air.

The word marble comes from the ancient Greek verb 'marmairo' which means 'to glow'. Like gold, this natural stone is its own form of steadfast wealth, visually striking and highly sought after. In Greece, the source of Thornton's natural stone, the iconic architecture of the ancient world has continued to attract the world's admiration for centuries.

This is the very stone the famous Venus de Milo was carved from, that now floats gracefully above the Brisbane River within the residences of Thornton.
